Protocols for handling Ebola cases is clarified

Manhattan. Gov. Andrew Cuomo and Mayor Bill de Blasio laid out Ebola quarantine procedures.

During a Sunday night press conference, Gov. Andrew Cuomo, Mayor Bill de Blasio and health officials discussed new travel protocols for people returning to the U.S. from West Africa.

"This is a war on a virus in West Africa," Cuomo said, adding that New Yorkers are balancing aid to Africa, protecting the health of New Yorkers and confronting fears of the virus.

Cuomo said health care workers who were exposed to Ebola patients will be asked to remain in their homes for a 21-day quarantine, during which their temperature and condition will be checked two times a day by visiting health care workers. Potential patients will be transported to a hospital if symptoms occur, Cuomo said.

Cuomo called New York's policy perhaps the safest in the country, and said he didn't anticipate patients violating a home quarantine.

Health care workers in West Africa who have not had contact with Ebola patients will be asked to stay home from work for three weeks, and Cuomo said if employers refuse to pay, the state will step in.

Back and forth

Gov. Cuomo said that his personal preference is to err on the side of caution in terms of protocols for dealing with Ebola.

- People who have had exposure to Ebola patients are being asked to stay at their homes in a self-quarantine during the period.
- They will be visited twice a day by health care professionals.

Visit Metro.us to read more about Ebola and efforts to fight the virus.

Cuomo and de Blasio stressed Ebola is not airborne or easily contracted.

De Blasio said he met with health care workers at Bellevue on Sunday who have been "emotionally" and "personally affected" by "people reacting negatively" to them treating Ebola patients.

"We want to see all our medical personnel who are part of this fight treated with respect, dignity and support," de Blasio said.

On Sunday, the White House also voiced concern to Gov. Cuomo and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie about the impact of quarantine orders on health care workers returning from West Africa, a senior administration official said.

Gov. Cuomo and Gov. Christie made the decisions on Oct. 24 after Dr. Craig Spencer came back to NYC infected.

"We have let the governors of New York, New Jersey and others states know that we have concerns with the unintended consequences of policies not grounded in science may have on efforts to combat Ebola at its source in West Africa," the Obama administration official said in a statement.

The White House will consult further with states as the guidelines are developed, the official said.

Harlem. Ebola doc's girlfriend returns home for quarantine

The fiancee of the New York doctor who has been diagnosed with the Ebola virus has returned home after a brief quarantine.

Morgan Dixon, who shares a Harlem apartment with Dr. Craig Spencer, was placed in an isolation unit at Bellevue Hospital on Thursday night and on Saturday was released to her home, where she'll remain in quarantine until Nov. 14.

Dixon, a development associate at Brooklyn's Hope Program, which helps homeless individuals find employment, has not shown any signs of the virus. METRO

Exploring 'New York's Underground Art Museum'

Manhattan. A new book catalogs all of the permanent art in the subway.

If you've noticed more artwork in the New York City subway in recent years, you're not imagining it.

The MTA's has 250 permanent artworks in the subway, and 100 of those have been added over the past eight years, said Sandra Bloodworth, director of MTA Arts & Design.

Bloodworth has co-authored a book with William Ayres on the subway's public art system. "New York's Underground Art Museum" is set to be published on Tuesday.

Bloodworth, who joined the MTA's "Arts for Transit" in 1988, said the arts program was created when the MTA was "on the brink of collapse" in the 1980s, and "everything," including signals and train cars, needed improvements.

Art city

"You don't tell New Yorkers why we have art; if you live here, you know why."
Sandra Bloodworth

"The projects started off relatively small but had a huge impact," Bloodworth said. Early installations included porcelain tiles by Milton Glaser at the Astor Street station, which Bloodworth said is inspired by the station's historic terracotta mosaics.

She said the art program has been "popular" from day one, solidified in the 1990s and gaining momentum ever since.

Fulton Center, expected to open later this month, will integrate artwork into the architecture, Bloodworth said, in the form of reflective panels that open the station to natural light.

Planning art into a station's design is no coincidence. Bloodworth said when a station is being rebuilt, the arts program receives about 1 percent of the finished budget.

And, even if commuters aren't even actively viewing the underground artwork, Bloodworth said passersby might reap the benefits as well.

"I think people experience public art in a variety of ways, some [pieces] speak to them, some don't speak to them," Bloodworth said.

"New York's Underground Art Museum" is published by Monacelli Press.

Bratton: Hatchet attack was a terror act

Harlem. The police commissioner said that the hatchet attack was premeditated and that the suspect had watched videos of beheadings.

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton is calling Thursday's hatchet attack on two police officers on patrol in Jamaica an act of terror.

Zale Thompson, 32, was shot and killed by police after he hit the officers with an 18-inch metal hatchet.

Officer Kenneth Healey, 25, was struck in the back of the head and remains hospitalized with a skull fracture in critical but stable condition.

During a Friday press conference, Bratton and other police officials said they believe Thompson's attack on the officers, who were posing for a photographer, was premeditated, and that he acted alone.

An investigation has found Thompson was discharged from the U.S. Navy and convicted of domestic assault in California. He recently visited websites associated with terror groups such as ISIS and Al Qaeda.

Police also said Thompson had viewed videos of beheadings.

"This is something he has been thinking about for some time, and thinking about with more intensity in recent days," NYPD Deputy Commissioner John Miller said.

Metro previously reported the four officers involved in the incident had graduated from the police academy earlier this year.

Another officer was hit in the arm with a hatchet, and a bystander was hit in the back from a stray police bullet. METRO

Stup!d MONEY MYTHS Debunked!
At a FREE Workshop

The Ripple Effect

If you are living by the old money paradigm, your financial future is in serious jeopardy. Our country is still feeling the ripple effect from the 2008 financial crash. And, I believe another one is on the horizon.

You Can't Win The Game If You Don't Know The Rules

The rules have changed. Sadly, most people still operate under the old money paradigm: go to school; get a job; work hard; save; invest in a 401k, etc. How's that working out for you? For most people, it's NOT!

Investors Get Money To Work For Them

If you cling to the old money paradigm, you will have to work harder and harder. Investors get money to work for them, instead of constantly working for money. The poor and middle class buy liabilities they mistake for assets. Investors acquire assets.

Members of the Tulalip Tribes community in Washington state say they are trying to comprehend how a life-long friendship among sports-loving cousins ended with one of them gunning down the other two, along with three female friends, in their high school cafeteria.

The shooter and one girl, identified by a family friend as Zoe Galasso, were killed while the other freshmen students were gravely wounded in Friday's morning rampage at Marysville-Pilchuck High School north of Seattle.

While police have not officially identified the gunman or discussed possible motives, family members told Reuters that 14-year-old Jaylen Fryberg was the shooter and the two male victims were his cousins, Nate Hatch and Andrew Fryberg, ages 14 and 15.

Hatch was in serious condition with a gunshot to the jaw while Andrew Fryberg was in critical condition with a gunshot wound to the head, hospital officials said.

Female victims Shaylee Chuckulnaskit and Gia Soriano, both 14, remained in critical condition at a different hospital. REUTERS

Toronto drills for disaster following twin terror attacks

Response. Security is normally relaxed in Canada, but has been tighter in the days since the Ottawa shooting.

Police officers wearing gas masks stand in the financial district during a mock "crisis response" exercise in Toronto. / REUTERS

About 100 police, firefighters and other emergency workers held a disaster-response drill in downtown Toronto's deserted financial district on Sunday following a week that saw two soldiers killed on Canadian soil.

Toronto emergency responders donning oxygen tanks and yellow full-body hazardous material suits shortly after dawn, set up decontamination tents and practiced how they would respond in an office tower that had received a suspicious package.

Quoted

"We had to be very specific with our strategic briefing after what happened in Ottawa."

Daniel Martin, staff sergeant with the Toronto Police Department

The drill had long been planned and was not a reaction to the twin attacks that police said had been carried out by men they described as home-grown radicals, officials said.

Some acknowledged that it took on a more urgent tone in the wake of those incidents.

The attacks, which police said were the work of Canadian citizens who were recent converts to Islam, came during a week that the nation sent additional jet fighters to the Middle East to take part in air strikes against Islamic State militants.

REUTERS

Violence. Senator says Islamist propaganda inspiring attacks in US

U.S. Senator Dianne Feinstein, chair of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, said recent "lone wolf" terrorism attacks show that propaganda from groups like Islamic State are inspiring attacks on U.S. soil.

"One of the problems is that the Internet as well as certain specific Muslim extremists are really firing up this lone wolf phenomenon.

"These attacks and the multiplicity of attacks in 2014 show that their propaganda is having some effect," the California Democrat said on CNN's "State of the Union" television program.

OMG! Custom gold rapper 'teeth' created through 3-D printing

Get a mouth of gold with "grillz." / ROOPA VASUDEVAN

Gold "grillz" are the mouthpiece for some of the music industry's biggest rappers. Now, New York-based artist Roopa Vasudevan uses algorithms generated from songs by the likes of Jay-Z, The Notorious B.I.G. and Rick Ross to create the unique mouth accessories via 3-D printer. The peaks and troughs of the "grillz" are determined by tropes such as "poverty" and "wealth" that appear in a track. The 30-year-old explains why a grill made of "Been Around The World" by Puff Daddy feating The Notorious B.I.G. and Mas is mostly flat with the exception of a couple of spikes, "because all Daddy does during the song is rap about how rich he is."

What is the main point of your creation?
All I want to do is make people look at the juxtaposition of poverty and wealth in hip-hop in a new way. I don't necessarily want to change anyone's mind about the music, especially because I personally love the tracks that I used for the project. But the idea is to represent something visually that someone might not have considered before.

How did you create them?
Basically, I'm taking rap lyrics and going through them with a program I wrote, looking for key words or phrases that either reference poverty or wealth in the rap lexicon. If the program finds a word that references poverty, it then looks around it for words referencing wealth, and vice versa. It then assigns a score or points that are generated by how close opposite words are to each other. The scores that are generated across the whole song are then translated into a topography, which was then extruded into 3-D on the front of the "grillz."

What melodies did you use to create them?
I ran the programs on a lot of different songs, but since I only was able to print five for the first showing, I stuck with the songs with the most interesting landscapes. Those were "Juicy" (The Notorious B.I.G.), "Hard Knock Life" (Jay-Z), "Hustlin'" (Rick Ross), "Make It Rain" (Fat Joe ft. Lil' Wayne) and "Been Around The World" (Puff Daddy, Mase and The Notorious B.I.G.).

Question

Do any rappers own your product?

I haven't gotten in contact with any of them as yet, but it would definitely be a high point in my artistic career if they wanted one.

Last US Marines hand over base as Brits end combat role

British troops ended their combat operations in Afghanistan on Sunday as they and U.S. Marines handed over two huge adjacent bases to the Afghan military, 13 years after a U.S.-led invasion launched the long and costly war against the Taliban.

Their coming departure leaves Afghanistan and its newly installed president, Ashraf Ghani, to deal almost unaided with an emboldened Taliban insurgency after the last foreign combat troops withdraw by year-end.

At the U.S. Camp Leatherneck and Britain's Camp Bastion, which lie next to each other in the southwestern province of Helmand, troops lowered the American and British flags for the final time on Sunday. REUTERS

Is a 'gap year' after high school for you?

Alternative education. Taking a break before college is increasingly popular.

Elizabeth Campbell spent a year tutoring English in Spain after graduating high school. / PROVIDED

It's a familiar script that millions of students follow each year: Graduate high school and then immediately start college.

But more and more students are embracing the "gap year" — a year of volunteering and working before heading to campus.

"In the beginning of senior year I was really stressed out with homework and extracurricular activities and everything that goes along with it in high school," says Elizabeth Campbell, a 19-year-old from Little Rock, Arkansas. "And I decided, 'Hey, maybe I want to take some time off and travel and learn another language.'"

Campbell decided to defer her admission to Furman University for a year and moved to Seville, Spain, as part of a gap year program with the Council on International Educational Exchange and spent a year learning Spanish and tutoring children.

In many ways, Campbell's story is typical of students who take gap years, says Jay Bacrania, the CEO of Signet Education in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Bacrania and his colleague Sheila Akbar often help plan gap years for the students they work with, which they stress isn't a yearlong vacation.

"They are going to be challenged," he says, adding that planning is key. "It's not really a way to disguise a year off."

LAKSHMI GANDHI
@LakshmiGandhi
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

The big questions

Things to consider

Students weighing whether to take a gap year should ask themselves these questions:

What do you want to accomplish? "Think about what your goals are," advises Bacrania. "Is there a project you want to work on?" He suggests that high school seniors talk with their families or other mentors about things they'd like to achieve during the year and to come up with a realistic plan reach those goals.

Are you taking time off for the right reasons? Sometimes students who didn't get into their dream college think that a gap year can help bolster their college applications and get them to the next level. "We don't encourage that," says Bacrania, noting that some students flirt with the idea of the gap year quite late into their senior years when they feel like they aren't getting into the schools they want. Both Akbar and Bacrania say they usually suggest that students complete the college application process and defer admission for a year.

How much structure do you need? Some students, like Campbell, want to focus on developing a skill or learning a language during their gap years. Akbar recalls working on a plan for a student who was interested in exploring careers in fashion. "We researched summer programs and said, 'These are the pros and these are the cons.'"

Can you build in time for reflection? The gap year isn't just about cramming your resume full of volunteer projects or filling your passport with stamps. Can you write a paper or a blog about what you've learned? "You want the student to reflect on their experience and find ways to share that experience with others," says Bacrania.

Applying for college? Don't break the bank

Application fees. With planning, applying to school doesn't have to be expensive.

Many families experience sticker shock during the application process. / GETTY IMAGES

With the average high school student applying to five or six schools, application and test score fees start to add up. We've compiled some ways students and parents can save some money during a stressful and expensive time of year.

Applying online can be less expensive.
Paper applications are time-consuming for all involved: Students have to organize and mail everything, and colleges have to employ staff members to manually enter all of the data into their systems. That's why many colleges don't charge for online applications — or they charge less. (And some don't have application fees at all, says the Huffington Post, naming Smith College, Colby College and Carleton College as three examples.)

Ask about fee waivers.
Don't be afraid to ask if fee waivers or reductions are available. Admissions officers are used to being asked, and having your fee waived won't be held against you when decision time comes around.

Find out if any schools consider SAT scores optional.
Many colleges say that submitting standardized test scores is optional. It may be worth it to opt out of sending your score in order to save on the processing fee. Of course, some students feel that their SAT scores enhance their applications, and therefore want to include them. Check with your guidance counselor about the best course of action.

Stress. A new form of therapy for students

College counseling centers are adapting to the digital age.

At the University of Florida, anxious students can participate in a program called Therapist Assisted Online. After meeting with a counselor in person, students will be enrolled in what the university describes as a "seven-week, interactive, Web-based program." Students who enroll will watch videos and participate in a series of exercises while also video conferencing with a counselor for 10-15 minutes a week.

Today, the LA Times is confirming a celebrity death hoax is just that, Jeff Daniels is trying to understand his own popularity, Chelsea Handler has no regrets, Jeff Ross is enjoying Halloween and Sara Silverman is enjoying some alone time.

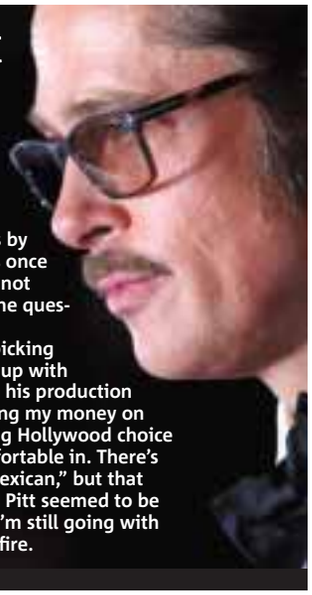
@Jeff_Daniels: I'm told I'm trending.

@chelseahandler: Visiting my nephews college dorm. I've never been so thankful I skipped college, or rather, college skipped me

@realjeffreyross: Everybody seems to be diggin my Rene Zellwegger costume.

@SarahKSilverman: It's good to be alone because you have time to think about what you look like when you're being alone

1 Which flick did Pitt think was the pits?



OK, here's a fun game. In the latest issue of Details magazine, Brad Pitt is featured in a fancy photo series shot by Mark Seliger, and instead of a full accompanying interview, the magazine dapples the images with some interesting quotes by Pitt. One of them is especially provocative: "I was once talked into a film for 'career maintenance.' I have not made that mistake since," Pitt says. Which begs the question, which film is he talking about?

While Pitt has generally been pretty good at picking projects, he's gotten really careful since shacking up with Angelina Jolie. But that also coincides nicely with his production company, Plan B, getting more clout. So I'm putting my money on 2004's laughable "Troy," an uncharacteristically Big Hollywood choice for Pitt — and one that he looks palpably uncomfortable in. There's also a slight possibility he's talking about "The Mexican," but that film's kind of adorable in its own scruffy way, and Pitt seemed to be having such a good time doing it that I doubt it. I'm still going with the terrible, terrible swords-and-sandals epic misfire.

2 'Hey, you, Malala, or Mindy, or whoever'

Well, this is awkward. According to the New York Times, after Mindy Kaling spoke at the New Yorker Festival, she was accosted by a "tipsy man in his 80s" who cornered her and told her, "Congratulations on your Nobel Prize," mistaking her for 17-year-old Pakistani activist Malala Yousafzai, who was recently awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Kaling took it well, at least, saying afterward, "Did he really think I'm Malala? And that if I were I'd be at the Boom Boom Room? That's the best thing that's happened all night."

Daily video

Must-see: 'Shia LaBeouf'

Musician Rob Cantor composed and arranged a new song, "Shia LaBeouf," a thrilling tale of being lost in the woods and terrorized by the infamous actor and sometimes performance artist. In the song, LaBeouf is revealed to be a sadistic cannibal. "He's almost upon you now and you can see there's blood on his face," Cantor speak-sings. "My God, there's blood everywhere!"

But that's just the song. The video for it, a live performance in a theater space, features Cantor backed by a band, a string quartet, the West Los Angeles Children's Choir and the Gay Men's Chorus of Los Angeles, plus choreographed dancers — some wearing giant papier-mache LaBeouf heads — kung fu fighters and aerialists. There's even a twist ending, which is even more delicious when you realize it's a visual reference to "Citizen Kane." Why not? (Watch it on Metro.us.)

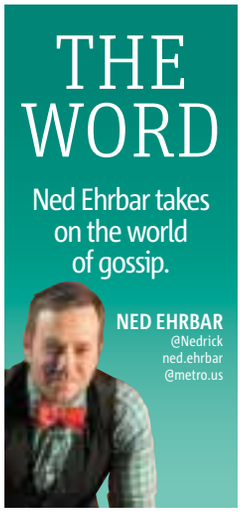
3 A swift change in scenery marks a Swift change of sound

Start spreadin' the news, she's releasin' today.



It's Taylor Swift Album Release Day, y'all! Oh wait, maybe forget the "y'all," as she's not really a country artist anymore. She left that back in Nashville and instead kicks off her album, "1989," with a track you might have heard already — since Swift released it last week in advance of the album — called "Welcome to New York." So, you know, welcome! Why is she being so "willkommen, bienvenue, welcome!" to everyone about a city she's only been living in for a tiny bit? Because she's trying to speak her truth! "I never thought I'd live in New York, because I thought I'd be too overwhelmed by how busy and bright and crazy the city is," Swift tells Esquire. "Then all of a sudden, this year, all I wanted to do was live in New York. I never thought I would be so happy being completely unattached to anyone romantically." And from that, she was inspired to write a song that will be the theme for NYU and Columbia freshman orientation weekends for at least the next three years. Hey, I'm glad Swift's new home is so inspiring, but I'd imagine any city would be great to live in when you can snatch up a $19.9 million apartment.

4 Hilton pi55e5 off Deadmau5

First Paris Hilton gets a gig that upsets Deadmau5, but wait until he sees the costume she wore on Friday night.

You might've gotten upset about the idea of Paris Hilton getting paid more than $1 million for a DJ set, but you've got nothing on actual DJ Deadmau5. He got so worked up, he wrote a scathing Tumblr post about the whole thing. "Personally, I would pay about as much to see her 'perform' as Indy fans would pay to watch me struggle to get out of first gear and 20 feet off the starting grid in an Indy500 race without ending up in a wreck," he writes. "Get the f— back in your go-kart. No need to prove that you found someone stupid enough to consider paying you a million dollars for something the world knows you aren't. Because here's what you actually are to everyone who knows better: ticket sales. Nothing more." Yowch.

#DontKillDafoe

Always dying

Actor Sean Bean has died so many times it's inspired memes, including the hashtag "#DontKillSeanBean." Dafoe isn't far behind. He's died at least 12 times, including being crucified in "The Last Temptation of Christ."

Asked what draws him to roles that involve him croaking, Dafoe says, "It's nice to have a good exit. Death is so dramatic. The subject doesn't necessarily attract me, but it does say something about what kinds of characters I'm attracted to and what things happen in the movies I do. Death is big on my list of things to do — when I'm ready."

Q&A WILLEM DAFOE A MAN OF ACTION

The serious, Oscar-nominated actor also greatly enjoys doing trashy thrillers like "John Wick."

Willem Dafoe is a character actor, which means that he does everything. He's been a superhero villain ("Spider-Man"), and he's been Jesus ("The Last Temptation of Christ"). This year alone, he's been in a Wes Anderson film ("The Grand Budapest Hotel") and a YA movie ("The Fault in Our Stars"). He also played a famous director in Abel Ferrara's "Pasolini." And now there's "John Wick," an action movie in which he plays an assassin asked to take out an old colleague (Keanu Reeves) who's on a revenge rampage.

You're a serious actor — one of the earliest members of the experimental theater company The Wooster Group — but one who has never been above action movies.

I like doing action sequences. It's fun because it's athletic and requires timing — a correct touch. It's what I like about performing, which is that you have a strong action. I often refer to myself as a task-oriented actor. That's very much where my training in theater comes from. You have a very clear sequence of movements. You have to learn the sequence. You get totally engaged and totally turned on.

Willem Dafoe plays one of Keanu Reeves' fellow assassins in the action movie "John Wick." / DAVID LEE

Your character has known Reeves' for a very long time. Did you two bother with a backstory?

I don't find backstory very useful. You can't play backstory. It can guide research. But I don't like that kind of stuff. I almost find it distracting, showy. I like to play what's in the scenes, have stuff occur to me. I like to pretend, and when I'm pretending certain things come up. But backstory, no.

There's that Spencer Tracy line: Know your lines and don't run into the furniture.

That's a little too glib for me. When I talk about the kind of things I'm experiencing rather than interpreting, it's a subtle thing, and sometimes people misunderstand me. It's not a lack of will or interest or research or depth — it's just a different way of acting. I'm not telling the audience anything. I'm pretending in a situation and things happen to me. And in my reactions and in my dealing with situations, with me being in the guise of a character, that will speak to the audience. My concentration is trying to find the truth or the magic or interesting things in dealing with a situation.

Tracy was probably joking anyway.

When I say it's glib, I mean everyone uses that to mean straight-shooting actors who just get up there and do it. But even with those guys, there's something special happening.

Box office. Audiences preferred watching teens playing with boards than Reeves with guns

"Ouija," a horror film inspired by the board game said to contact the dead, haunted the top of movie charts in the United States and Canada, collecting $20 million in weekend ticket sales and knocking Brad Pitt's "Fury" out of first place.

Another new entry, the action thriller "John Wick" starring Keanu Reeves as a hit man out for revenge, debuted in second, taking in $14.2 million from Friday through Sunday, according to tracking firm Rentrak.

"Fury," a World War II drama about a U.S. Army tank crew, earned $13 million to claim the No. 3 spot, while Ben Affleck's mystery thriller "Gone Girl" grossed $11.1 million, finishing fourth. Rounding out the Top 5, animated movie "The Book of Life" took in $9.8 million. The film draws on Mexican art and wooden puppets to tell a love story rooted in the Day of the Dead festivities.

One of the dumb teens in "Ouija" plays with a spooky planchette.
UNIVERSAL PICTURES

In limited release, the Edward Snowden documentary "Citizenfour" opened to a very strong $125,172 from only five theaters, for $25,721 per theater. Meanwhile, "Birdman" expanded in its second weekend, nabbing $1.4 million for a $28,700 average. "Dear White People," also in its second weekend, made $1.3 million from 386 theaters.

PEOPLE HATE TOO MANY OF PITT'S GREAT FILMS

Brad Pitt got dirty for the masses in 2012's "Killing Them Softly."
THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

'Killing Them Softly'

Netflix Instant
There ought to be a category on Netflix Instant called "Great Brad Pitt Movies Everyone Hated At First." There are enough of them, including this grimy thriller, with Pitt as a greasy-haired enforcer trying to clean up the mess of a robbery. Too bleak for the mainstream, it was dissed by critics, who dwelled on its not-very-subtle use of Barack Obama's election as backdrop and commentary.

And yet it's peerlessly grizzled — as hopeless as the novel by George V. Higgins, pulp's starkest poet. Best of all are the two scenes owned by James Gandolfini, playing a hedonistic assassin too far gone to even do his job. He storms in, downs martinis and pesters hookers, then exits as quickly as he came in. As in real life, he leaves a mark.

'Beware of Mr. Baker'

Netflix Instant
Jack Bruce, one third of super trio Cream, passed away this weekend. Apart from blasting "Wheels of Fire" as loud as you can, one way of celebrating his work would be queuing up this documentary profile of the band's most volatile member: drummer and persistent rabid dog Ginger Baker. Though found living poor on an African farm, the hellion hasn't chilled; he begins the film by bashing the director in the face with his cane. The film then hops back to see him pissing off everyone he met — while creating great music, including helping to popularize Fela Kuti in the West.

'The Hunger Games: Catching Fire'

Netflix Instant
There are scores of diamonds in the rough buried on Netflix Instant. But who are we kidding? We'll all just watch this.

The forerunners in

CMJ. We look at who wowed in NYC over the past five days.

The CMJ Music Marathon received an unwanted push in publicity on Friday when it was revealed that Dr. Craig Spencer, New York's first Ebola patient, had been to a Brooklyn venue where CMJ events were happening the night before he was diagnosed. But that didn't stop more than a thousand bands from playing for thousands of fans. Here are a few acts we think you'll be hearing more from. METRO

1 French Style Furs

Featuring Cold War Kids' Nathan Willett and Matt Maust alongside Nathan Warkentin of We Barbarians, French Style Furs also includes a group of grooving auxiliary members, including a percussionist, a female vocalist and a horn section. If the crowd knew that the songs were inspired by a monk's poetry(!), it had no effect on how much they danced.

PAT HEALY

2 Tei Shi

Sensuous, expansive vocals layered on synthetic beats defines Tei Shi, the moniker of Columbian singer Valerie Teicher. The songs follow the trend of alt R&B (see FKA Twigs, Miguel etc.) mixing electronics, pop and hip-hop, but her delicate-yet-upbeat tunes are in their own realm.

CHRIS LEO PALERMINO

Up from Down Under

GETTY IMAGES

3 CMJ was totally Aus-some

One surprising revelation about this year's CMJ is how many of the noteworthy bands were from Australia. Make sure to check out the slightly psychedelic soul sounds of Saskwatch (pictured), the controlled angst of SPOOKYLAND and the energetic ensemble jamming of King Gizzard & the Lizard Wizard.

3 Sun Club

This hirsute five-piece from Baltimore had the audacity to take the stage to Celine Dion's "My Heart Will Go On." The band also have the audacity to mix dashes of calypso into their punky poppy emo-oh-oh-oh songs. When they play their super catchy hooks, they jump around onstage like kids jumping on the bed, asserting dominance over the babysitter. PH

4 DeJ Loaf

This scrappy Detroit MC delivers menacing lyrics in a silky voice. Backed by her mother, who serves as her hypewoman, DeJ also drew support from heavyweights Jadakiss and Remy Ma, who guested on verses.

Tip

Set your alarm

"Show up earlier, whenever the market is getting ready to open, because you'll find that crafty chefs with small restaurants like to empty things out."

Shop like a Top Chef

RICHARD BLAIS WAS THE WINNER OF "TOP CHEF ALL-STARS." / BRAVO, NBCU

Grab something you haven't cooked before — the vendors at the stall can help you work with it. / POLKA DOT RF

Richard Blais. The reality TV show winner and judge shares his farmers market tips.

Even for an experienced home cook, the vegetable world can be daunting — especially at a farmers market. So how do you approach produce shopping without fear and keep healthy eating interesting?

"The good thing is when you're at a decent farmers market, you can't really make a bad choice," says Richard Blais, who's back on "Top Chef" as a judge for its 12th season on Bravo. "Shop in a great place where the farmers are, and then you know it's in season."

We brought Blais along on a trek to the market for some professional advice.

To the rescue

One-pot wonder

Veggies looking a bit sad a week on? "Soup is a save-all for anything. I'm stealing this from another chef buddy of mine, but he said, 'You're always four ingredients away from good soup.' And I like that. If you don't know what to do, you can always make soup out of it. [If] you cook something long enough and puree it, it's going to be a pretty good soup."

1 Hit the ATM: "Cash is always a good idea."

2 Be patient: "Give the market a good stroll, give it a good once-over. You know you want strawberries, but they're going to be a little different at each stall."

3 Take notes: "We're always telling a story with food, so you want to come back and say, 'It's from Blankity-Blank Farms, it's right up the road, they have a goat.'"

4 Make it a game: "Take your favorite TV show — 'Top Chef,' obviously — and play the Mystery Basket Game. Don't be afraid to get a couple of ingredients that you haven't cooked before."

5 Make conversation: "Ask the farmers, the people working the stalls, because they want to sell their stuff. They'll probably have a pretty good idea of what to do with it."

6 When in doubt, find the common bond: "No matter what the ingredient, use similar ideas. A parsnip kind of looks like a carrot, so they're going to cook in the same way, just as a pork chop is going to cook similar to a rib chop in beef."

The New York City Marathon sets off at 9 a.m. Sunday, taking more than 50,000 participants on a 26.2-mile journey through all five boroughs. Whether you've been training for months or plan to cheer from the sidelines, show your support with commemorative gear. EVA KIS

As the event's official clothing partner, ASICS has every inch of you covered (good thing, too, with Sunday's high expected to be in the 40s). Find everything from headbands to arm warmers, all branded with the marathon logo, plus special editions of the Gel-Nimbus 16. www.asicsamerica.com

Brooks Running's Adrenaline GTS 15 Freedom takes its fashion cues from Lady Liberty, wrapped in a black-and-white image of her and her city, and accented with oxidized green and touches of orange (symbolizing her torch) to spread "inspiration for runners in the eternal pursuit of a healthy life, liberty and the perfect run." www.brooksrunning.com

New Balance didn't just redesign a shoe for the marathon; it re-engineered it. The Fresh Foam Zante NYC keeps its cushioned sole but has a more aggressive push-off at the toe. The line will launch in March, but only the limited-edition marathon version will have a grey upper inspired by the concrete streets most of us use to get in our miles. The city skyline is printed on the liner and the state motto, Excelsior, on the shoelace. www.newbalance.com

Adidas is celebrating five years of partnering with AKTIV Against Cancer, founded by nine-time NYC Marathon winner Grete Waitz, by refreshing its AKTIV apparel line with a new logo and a social media campaign: Show your "A" game by posting a photo using a hand symbol in the shape of an A and tag it #mystepmatters to Twitter or Instagram, and Adidas will donate $1 to AKTIV. www.aktivagainstcancer.org

HOW TO GET A JOB THROUGH A REFERRAL

Online retailer Zappos made news earlier this year when it announced it would be zapping job postings. That's right, they've been nixed, and hopeful job seekers have to find another way in the door.

According to industry buzz, they want to get to know applicants rather than having them apply to the giant black hole known as the applicant tracking system. Prompting job seekers to become "insiders," their site includes ambassadors' Twitter handles and LinkedIn profiles for each team and essentially details ways that job seekers can connect to recruiters via social media and through referrals.

They're on to something. According to a study by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, referred candidates are twice as likely to get interviews as non-referred candidates. Referred candidates also have a 40 percent better chance of getting hired than other applicants. Armed with this data, job seekers should rely on referrals for the highest rate of return on their time and energy investment in a job search. Here are a few tips on how to get started.

Want to turn that frown upside down? Employers tend to smile at referrals. / PHOTODISC

1 Look at your social networks. For starters, search LinkedIn for connections, ask for introductions and schedule informational interviews. But don't just do this when you're looking for a job and eager to move on — people can see through that. Networking is an ongoing process to forge strong connections and build new skills. It's truly a journey.

2 Conversations on the phone or better yet, in-person will only be to your benefit. An employee may not feel comfortable forwarding your résumé if he or she met you two years ago at a conference and hasn't heard from you since. However, if you had invited her out for coffee three months ago and followed up this week, you're in a much better position to be referred.

3 Let your true colors shine while getting to know each other. Demonstrate passion for your current role and/or the path you want to pursue. Also, share a little something personal about yourself, whether you're a season ticket holder for the Giants or a serious fan of "Scandal." It's fodder for conversation aside from serious job talk, and you never know when another connection can be made.

4 Keep in mind that recruiting isn't scientific. Technical skills are important, but when two candidates are compared, from my experience working with countless hiring managers, the hiring decision always comes down to "Who do you like better?"

Your best shot getting in the door and staying there relies upon building a network of reliable referrers who you can count on to vouch for you.

How not to get rich

Re: 'Those who oppose Sykes' column are really just envious' (Metro, Oct. 23) Well said, Mr. Falcon. Many don't want to put in the effort to reach their goals, so they placate themselves by ripping on others as an outlet for their misery. Anyone spouting negativity is clearly jealous or doesn't have the GONADS to achieve their goals as Mr. Sykes did. Also, Mr. Sykes wasn't bragging, he was alluding that Lamborghinis AREN'T as fun as they seem — he was advising people to THINK TWICE! Hence, anyone whining is GRASPING FOR STRAWS. You'll never see ANYONE secure in themselves poking holes in another's success! MONIQUE P. CHOUINARD, VIA EMAIL

US should end trade

We are going through this time to make our global exports more competitive with nations with a poorer standard of living. This is a notion that should be reserved to smaller nations. For we, one of the largest nations in the world and rich in resources, do not really need global exports to function. We have plenty of demand within our borders to keep ourselves with a supply of jobs and demand for our output. World trade has always been a negative factor in our economy. HENRY T. GAUDSMITH, VIA EMAIL

Bargnani to miss first three games

Knicks fans have a reason to be frustrated with forward Andrea Bargnani before the season has even begun. Head coach Derek Fisher said Thursday Bargnani will miss the first three games of the season due to a hamstring injury. He hasn't played since the preseason opener against Boston on Oct. 8. The Knicks open Wednesday with Chicago.

Hapless Smith benched by Jets

NFL. Rex Ryan wouldn't say whether he'll stick with Michael Vick next week against the Chiefs.

The Michael Vick era may have begun in New York, as the veteran quarterback replaced a benched Geno Smith late in the first quarter of the Jets' 43-23 loss to the Bills.

Smith had three interceptions on the Jets' first four drives, leading to the earliest benching of his career.

Head coach Rex Ryan seemed at a loss after the game to explain Smith's performance, but he made it clear he was unclear who would start Week 9.

"I have no idea," Ryan said. "We'll look at that later."

Ryan immediately confirmed Smith would start the following week when he was benched during a loss to San Diego in Week 5.

Vick finished 18-of-36 for 153 yards with an interception and two lost fumbles. But he did lead the Jets on all four of their scoring drives.

"I still hold myself to a high standard. I feel I can come in at any moment and make something happen," Vick said. "Maybe that's not the case, maybe that's not realistic and that's wishful thinking for myself. At least that's my optimism, that's what I believe in. With a full week of practice, we'll see, maybe at some point. But I came in, [and] did the best I could."

Vick led the offense to 17 points on his first five drives to cut the Bills lead to 24-17 at halftime.

"I made the move to go to Mike. I think we responded," Ryan said. "There was a lot good things we did with Mike in there and he did personally. But we've got to take care of the football better."

What went wrong

1 Pick play
Geno Smith started the game 2-of-8 for five yards, which isn't surprising for a quarterback who has one of the lower completion percentages in the league. But the three interceptions were astoundingly bad even by Smith's less-than-lofty standards. The decision to bench him in favor of Michael Vick before he could get a fifth series is something that should carry over into next week.

2 Franchise cornerstone
First-round pick Sammy Watkins didn't get a ton of balls thrown his way but he made the most of his limited opportunities. He finished with three receptions for 157 yards and a touchdown.

3 Not on the defense
Given a short field to play with, the performance of the defense might be one of the best of the year. They bent but didn't break as much as they could have.

GENO SMITH HAS NOW BEEN BENCHED TWICE THIS SEASON. GETTY IMAGES

By the numbers

Geno Smith threw more completions to Buffalo defenders (three) than Jets players (two).

Kyle Orton threw four touchdowns in a game for the first time since Nov. 14, 2010.

150+
Sammy Watkins is the second player with over 150 receiving yards against the Jets this year (Jordy Nelson).

New face, new place

Harvin plays 'really well' in debut: Ryan

Harvin was targeted nine times, but only had three receptions for 22 yards. / GETTY IMAGES

It was far from an ideal debut, but the Jets still managed to get a taste Sunday of what Percy Harvin can bring to the offense.

"I was very comfortable. Throughout the week I was picking it up fairly well," Harvin said. "I think my first two days, I pretty much had all the formations down. The plays, I just kept going at them. They were starting to come to me this week during practice."

Harvin finished with 194 totals yards on offense and special teams, including a 35-yard return on the game's opening kick.

He was used all over the field, lining up in the slot and out wide, including in the first quarter when quarterback Geno Smith badly misfired on a go route for an interception. And he was lined up in the backfield at times, including on a 7-yard gain in the second quarter on a pitch from quarterback Michael Vick.

Harvin admitted after the game he hadn't played that much lined up wide since he was in high school. The Jets hinted all week they were going to utilize Harvin in a limited role. Instead, he was targeted nine times, second highest on the team. The most time he missed came in the first half when he was out during testing for a concussion. He returned before halftime, however.

"All things considered, I thought Percy really played well. That's not an easy task," head coach Rex Ryan said. "We were going to play him more than he let on. It was a challenge to a guy to come into a new team, but I thought he did a great job. This guy is obviously a big-time playmaker. I'm happy he's on our team." KRISTIAN DYER

Lions rally overseas, Eagles lose

NFL. Detroit saw its usual last-second heroics in London, while Tom Brady exploded for five touchdowns.

NFL fans looking for a full day of football began at 9:30 a.m. on the East Coast and got an exciting game at Wembley Stadium to kick off over 14 hours of football.

Patriots 51, Bears 23
The Patriots posted four TDs in the second quarter alone Sunday as they brutalized the Bears at Gillette Stadium. Tom Brady was superb, completing 30-of-35 passes for 354 yards and five touchdowns. Three of Brady's touchdown passes were caught by Rob Gronkowski, who had a monster afternoon with nine catches for 149 yards in the 51-23 win.

Lions 22, Falcons 21
The Lions offense showed up late to the game with the earliest start in NFL history, but Matthew Stafford and Co. thrived in the second half as Detroit (6-2) rallied hard to beat Atlanta at Wembley Stadium in London. The Falcons (2-6) were leading 21-0 at halftime but their offense struggled to find any rhythm in the second half.

Seahawks 13, Panthers 9
Russell Wilson completed a 23-yard touchdown pass to Luke Willson with 47 seconds remaining to get Seattle (4-3) back into the win column. Carolina (3-4) did not score a touchdown against the Legion of Boom.

Bengals 27, Ravens 24
Cincy QB Andy Dalton made up for a late fumble and interception by scoring the winning touchdown, a one-yard touchdown plunge with 57 seconds remaining, and the Bengals righted the ship. Cincy also beat the Ravens in Week 1.

Vikings 19, Bucs 13
Vikings rookie linebacker Anthony Barr had a walk-off forced fumble and touchdown return on the first play of overtime as Minnesota (3-5) edged the Bucs (1-6) in Tampa Bay. Fellow Minnesota rookie, Teddy Bridgewater, was efficient at quarterback, throwing for one touchdown and zero interceptions.

Dolphins 27, Jaguars 13
Jacksonville's Blake Bortles looked like the rookie he is as both of his interceptions went the other way for touchdowns in Miami's win. Louis Delman had an 81-yard return for a touchdown in the first quarter and Brent Grimes' 22-yard return occurred early in the third quarter.

Chiefs 34, Rams 7
The Chiefs (4-3) were the kings of Missouri Sunday as they scored 34 unanswered points to trounce the Rams (2-5). Jamaal Charles ran for a pair of touchdowns and Knile Davis had a 99-yard kickoff return for a touchdown. The Kansas City defense sacked St. Louis quarterback Austin Davis seven times.

Texans 30, Titans 16
Arian Foster has been doing his best DeMarco Murray impression lately as the Texans (4-4) running back ran for over 100 yards for the fourth straight game. Foster found the end zone three times against Tennessee (2-6) Sunday, twice via the run and once via reception.

THE EAGLES ARE NOW 5-2 THIS SEASON. GETTY IMAGES

Afternoon games

- Cardinals 24, Eagles 20 Nick Foles' pass into the back corner of the end zone couldn't quite be hauled in at the final whistle as the Eagles lost for just the second time.
- Steelers 51, Colts 34 Ben Roethlisberger was the only QB with a bigger game than Brady on Sunday in the league's highest-scoring contest this season. Roethlisberger finished with 522 passing yards and six touchdowns.
- Browns 23, Raiders 13 The Browns bounced back from an ugly loss at Jacksonville and avoided becoming the first team to ever lose back-to-back against rookie QBs with two touchdowns in the fourth quarter.
